International Cocoa Organization

The International Cocoa Organization (ICCO) was established in 1973 under the auspices of the United Nations to administer the provisions of the 1972 International Cocoa Agreement, and its successor Agreements of 1975, 1980, 1986, 1993 and 2001. The Agreements were concluded among governments of the vast majority of cocoa-producing and cocoa-consuming countries by the Secretary-General of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD).

The International Cocoa Organization currently comprises 41 members, divided between producing and consuming countries.

The primary objective of the International Cocoa Organization is to promote international cooperation by providing a worldwide forum for cocoa, contributing to market stabilization and assurance of supplies at reasonable prices, promoting transparency in the cocoa market and conducting research and development projects to achieve a sustainable world cocoa economy.

In March 2001, the Sixth International Cocoa Agreement was concluded in Geneva, Switzerland and came into force in 1 October 2003. The two major innovations of the new Agreement are an explicit mandate to work on projects and programmes to achieve a sustainable world cocoa economy and to encourage greater participation of the private sector in the work of the Organization.
